the younger brother of the deceased, whom the widow is supposed to marry, 3) from a master and a servant woman or slave. In such cases the child is not considered kharami, but nikokhsiz, i. e., born without a wedding, outside wedlock, and remains a member of the family, is not despised, and even inherits on an equal basis with the other children.

It is said by the baksy (sorcerer) Aike, of the Kurama uyezd, that when a woman in labor cannot give birth (balany bittirmeydi) or is giving birth improperly (egri), the sorcerer calls in the spirit Nurperi and others to give her more strength. According to the evidence of E. A. Aleksandrov, during birth they always send for a sorcerer, if there is one in the neighborhood.

When the moment arrives for the delivery of the child, one woman takes the woman in labor in her arms, placing her knees to the latter's spine, and presses her stomach. The woman in labor says: Press, press! (tart, tart). If the woman's strength is not great enough, a dzhigit /rider/ takes her place. Levshin says that everyone entering the tent during this event is supposed to give the woman in labor a skirt and say: Go out (chyk). According to Torgai this is not done. /98/ When the afterbirth (ui or dzho!das) does not appear soon after the birth of the child, a woman takes a pestle from a mortar (kelesab) and starts to pound the ground in the courtyard. She asks: Has it come out? (tusti me). The women inside the tent answer three times: It came out! (tusti).

Neighbors who know of the confinement do not enter the tent, but anyone who enters accidently, man or woman say: It is born, it is born (tuar, tuar), and must tear half his clothing (itegin yirtady), to make the labor easier. When the woman in labor is in great pain, they assume that the child is in reverse position (ters kel'di). Then one woman lifts the woman in labor with the legs up, asking one of the old women: Is it straight or reversed? (ong ba terebe). The latter answers three times: straight (ong). After this the woman in labor is put back on the ground.

An hour after the delivery, when the woman who has given birth is bleeding, she is sometimes being pressed down (basady) by the evil demon (albasty) Martu. (1) Martu will cause her death if a man or a

1. Martu never frightens men.

844 good mullah is not called in who knows how to strike him (Martuny 755 uratugun). Torgai transmits from the words of someone who knows
776 how to hit Martu, that Martu appears in the form of a little yellow girl (sary kyzday). Martu carries disease (yukbaly), and therefore young women do not come in to the woman in labor. In order to bring relief to the woman in labor it is necessary to expel the evil spirit. They shoot off guns for this and make noise outside the tent. (2)

844 A woman never gives birth in the house of her mother, even under accidental circumstances, riding through, etc.

846 After the delivery the mother lies down for 3-4 days, eating fatty food, tea and other small and hot (issyk) food, but not cooling (suuk).

553 When a child is born, they slaughter an animal, and they give the young men kids for kukbure. The old men are regaled and they give /99/ the name. When the children are dying one after another,
551 then fate is propitiated in the following manner. They give the child some sort of humiliating name, connecting it with a notion of long life, for example, they give the name Kuchukbay, saying: Will he not remain among the living in the form of a whelp? (byr kuchukdey tiri bulub yurermeken). Names such as Kutebar, Bokkut, Maykut, Itakyak, Katpa (camel's sickness) are not rare. The names Tokhta (stop), Tursun (let him stop) must be foretokens of long life. They 751 run a silver ring through the nose cartilage of an only child of male or female sex, when the other children have died. Often the names originate from words which were spoken by chance by people who came in, for example, if someone said that the child was ugly or blond like a Russian, then its nickname would become Yamanbay, or Orusbay. On the occasion of a general's riding through, one child in the Chimkent uyezd received the name Dzhandaral. Many Kazakhs bear two names.

Examples of female names are Uriuk (apricot), Pistagul' (pistachio flower), Miizgul' (the flower of a plum), Al'magul' (apple blossom), Alva (halva), Khuraz (rooster), Sarykyz (yellow girl), Tursungul' (stop!, or flower), Saltanat (kingdom). Batpa Zaura, i.e., Fatima and Zukhra are the names of girl twins. In the epics one finds the female names of Gul'khanys, Karlygash (swallow), Gul'barchin, Bayan, Dzhibek (silk).

After giving birth for the first time, the woman visits the home

844 Births take place under the same conditions as among the peasants in the remote corners of our fatherland. A midwife is present, who has recourse to rough methods in difficult cases, not infrequently causing the death of the woman in labor. On 553 the fifth day the child is given a name, usually by the midwife (it is usually the name of some object -- bridle, whip, vessel, cord, etc., in general whatever comes into the head). More rarely the name is given by the aksakal, and then it is given in memory of some well-known ancestor of the clan, or the name may be given by the mullah. In this case the children receive names of persons connected in one way or another with 852 Mohammed. Circumcision takes place in the fifth year. On 304 the occasion of propitious births the Kirghiz /Kazak/ do not 844 forget to arrange a feast and to celebrate this event.

Funerals are quite simple. The deceased is placed on the 764 left side of the yurt (near the entrance) behind a partition of chiy grass, and couriers are sent through the villages with the news. All those acquainted in any degree with the deceased consider /220/ it their duty to visit the deceased without fail, since by this (according to Moslem law) the sins of the deceased and of the visitor himself are alleviated. The friends of the deceased who are his contemporaries make the ablutions, and for this they receive his clothing. The others usually weep loudly and express their condolences to his family. They wrap the dead in a white sheet (or silk) called "akhret" (i.e., "the end of the world," or the clothing of the other world) and fasten it with string at the head, waist, and feet. After this he is carried out of the village to an open place, laid on the ground in such a way that the face is toward the southwest (in the direction of Mecca), i.e., the head at the northeast, and the body not flat on its back but slightly on the side (on the [782] shoulder). Here the prayer "dzhanata" (the liberation of the soul) is read in Arabic. The mullah usually asks: "was he (the deceased) without sin?" To which those present reply: "He was [783] without sin." If he was sinful, the mullah proposes that the sins of the deceased be redeemed with livestock. Formerly This redemption went to the poor, but now it goes to the mullah.

428 For the most part the father gives his oldest son preference, but this depends on his good [778] will. Divisions of families used to be encountered more rarely, for danger forced them to move as nomads with large auls. Now this reason for keeping together is considerably less urgent, and ties of kinship in general are beginning to lose their importance.

• 844 Birth. The Kazakh appears in the world without causing any particular worries to his relatives. Only when there is a difficult [754] birth do they call in the assistance of their own doctors, that is, conjurers and sorcerers. It is self-evident that in most cases their devices are actually harmful. In fortunate cases they consist only of whisperings and grimaces, but in more decisive instances more 846 violent measures are taken. In most cases little peace is allowed the woman who has borne the child. Rest before and after delivery is 553 set at a very short period. The mother has /342/ only one right: to name her newborn child. She does this in a very original way, acting entirely upon inspiration, often naming the child after the first object she happens to look at after the birth. As a result names occur like It-Ayak, that is, dog's leg, and so forth. Sometimes, however, they name them for Moslem saints, adding to the name the word Ir (Man), thus- Ir Ali, Ir Mohammed, and so on.

852 Circumcision is performed according to Moslem law while the mullahs read prayers, and in general is circumcision inaugurated by festivities, but does not occur until after the third year.
